

Rimstone Cooperative now has an updated and refreshed web site. The content and layout is clean, sharp and easy to navigate, and it is “smartphone friendly”.

The web site structure is simple and easily updated by anyone with simple web site maintenance skills. It includes links to new information about the Scrubby Creek Cave property purchase, and to recent Rimstone Newsletters.

Facebook — Some new features include the two social networking links at the bottom of the home page.

We are now using Facebook because the material can be publicly available, and there is unlimited storage space for photos and other materials.

People can “like” the events and photos, and “tag” people in photos, and all this will help with broader publicity for Rimstone and it's causes.

One of these Facebook links goes to the new Rimstone Coop Facebook page (with information back to 1974), and the second link goes to the new Homeleigh Facebook page and timeline which includes a history of Homeleigh back to 1885 (and which needs more material and photos).

Rimstone Coop Blog — Also on the home page (right hand side) are the recent blog entries from the Rimstone (Wordpress) blog tool which has recently been started. This makes it easier to get latest news and event details onto the home page by appropriate people without having to update the home page itself.

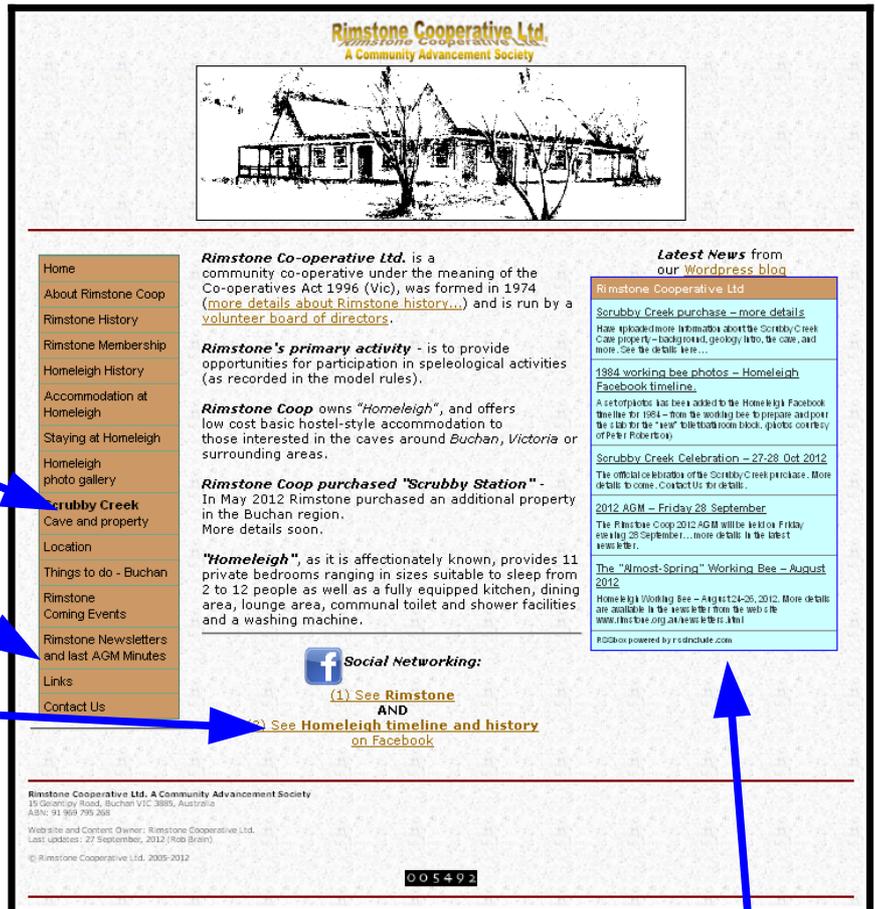

Is any of this useful? — We are dabbling with Facebook and social networking in order to become more widely known, and more relevant with the younger generation. This can be especially useful when seeking funding and support for activities such as property purchase. But is this the right way to go?

Feedback — Feedback is most welcome.

And the web site header graphic and logo is not final — more input is needed.
